

Other Leadership Training

Evidence of regular leadership training activities for student council members:

On Google Classroom, Ken Nedler, Sandra Mesa, and Carrie Pierce, will provide various leadership training assignments for student council members in the Student Leadership class. For example, one of our assignments is a Weekly Self Evaluation (attached). You fill out your leadership values for the week and how you carried out and demonstrated initiative, kindness, serving others, and connecting with others. Our goal is to report our week and encourage ourselves to go out of our comfort zone to reach out to other new people a part of our student body. For student council members that are in the regular class because they are a freshman or because it is their first year, they are provided with leadership training through the reading of The Student Leadership Guide. After each few chapters, you reflect and write about what you read and how you will apply it to ASU (attached is an example of a response to the reading of The Student Leadership Guide from a student this past year. The black writing is the student's response, and the gray writing is Mesa's response to the student).